Indian Joe Brewing represents the culmination of a long-time dream for me and it didn't come easy. The way I see it, the challenges I faced were insignificant compared to those of my ancestors, who had been forced into the Spanish Mission system and later relocated to Indian Reservations and other areas of North San Diego County. Growing up, my elders, such as my mother, grandmother, aunts, and uncles, told stories about my Native heritage and culture. One of my aunts, Louise Foussat, was a widely respected community advocate in Oceanside, California. She was the driving force behind the creation of Luiseno Park and the city named the Louise Foussat Elementary School after her. Of all the stories recounted to me by my elders, the ones that resonated most were about my uncle Joe, and how he became a legend in the local Native American community.

My Great Uncle Joe was a Luiseño Indian from North San Diego County. His grandfather had tended to the vines at the San Luis Rey Mission, but brewing beer was my great-great grandfather's real passion. My Great Uncle Indian Joe earned a reputation in the early 1900s for brewing outstanding beers. His recipes were infused with natural ingredients — some with medicinal properties — gathered from canyons and valleys throughout the coast and neighboring reservations. Indian Joe was a self-taught master brewer, and his story helped shape my future.

In my 20s, I was introduced to the art of craft brewing after helping my father and a German master brewer formulate small batches of beer. I was mesmerized by the process and how unique flavors could be achieved by blending different natural ingredients. Inspired to become a brewer, I asked my entrepreneur friend, Pedro, if he would go into business with me in the late 1980s. He told me that I was a crazy dreamer: "There's no way we could compete with giants like Bud, Miller and Coors," he said. So I put my dream on hold. Then, in the late 1990s, I watched local microbreweries like Stone, Ballast Point

Main Brewery Page - Edit Cover Pic - Admin

The screenshot shows a brewery's main page on the beerPopper platform. At the top, there's a navigation bar with icons for home, search, and settings. The main header features the brewery's logo, "Automatic Brewing Co.", and its location, "San Diego, CA". Below the header is a large, dark, textured background image of what appears to be a brewery interior or equipment. Overlaid on this image is a white rectangular form for editing the cover photo. The form has a title "Edit Cover Photo" and a placeholder text "Enter link to cover photo (.jpg or .png)" with a corresponding input field. A "Submit" button is located below the input field. To the left of the main content area, there's a sidebar with links for "About", "Hours", "Story", "Address", "Beers", "Follow", and "Message". Another sidebar below it lists "Followers" with three user profiles: Mikal Callahan, Justin Goulet, and Myles Merrill. To the right of the main form, there are two sections: "Following" which lists Ballast Point, Green Flash, and Acoustic Ales, and "Highest Rated" which lists Red Ale, Peach Ale, and Hazelnut Porter. At the bottom right, there's a "Calendar" section.
